Claims 13-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In claim 13, line 5, "the seat lower component", lacks definite antecedent basis.

In reciting the second axis, the claim should set forth its position relative to the first axis, for clarity and definiteness.

The "upholstered component loading position" and the "backrest loading position" should be defined in structural terms, for example, setting forth the position and orientation of the component relative to the other elements, so as to clearly define the invention. The same applies to the "folded-over position", recited later in the claims.

The "third axis" should be located and positioned relative to the other elements, in particular the other axes.

Claim 18, in reciting a position being "passed through", is awkward and unclear.

Claim 19 as a whole is confusing and unclear, and moreover, the reference to the components being "vertically adjustable", is not sufficiently defined and supported by the claim language, and it is unclear as to what provides such vertical adjustment.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 13-19, so far as definite, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by either Freijy et al or Sonnenberg et al.

Both Freijy et al (figs. 1-5) and Sonnenberg et al (figs. 1-4) show structure as claimed, including seat and back components that may move to use, loading and folded-over positions. Note that in Freijy et al, the first and second lower components include 30 and 50, wherein the seat rotates by itself about axis A, while the seat and back together rotate about a parallel axis E. It is assumed that the backrest includes a conventional reclining mechanism common to most vehicle seats, which would allow forward tilting over the seat cushion to some extent.

In Sonnenberg et al, the seat rotates about 92, while the seat and back together rotate about parallel axis 12.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Kayumi, Downey, Salani et al, Mitschelen et al, Kojima et al, and Jach et al show various features of the invention.
